

THE STATE HIGHWAY

Bill Requires That the Road Pass Through Harrisburg

$5,000,000 APPROPRIATION

Governor, Attorney General and Highway Commissioner to Select Route—No Trolley Line.

Harrisburg, March 2.—The 'cross-state highway bill approved by Governor Stuart, was presented in the House last night by Ambler of Montgomery, chairman of the Roads Committee.

The bill carries an appropriation of $5,000,000. The route is to be from Philadelphia to Pittsburg, through Harrisburg, the exact route to be selected by the Governor, Attorney General and Highway Commissioner, and to follow existing highways so far as possible.

The Highway Commissioner is to have charge of building the road, under the supervision of the Governor. Surveys are to be made and contracts let for the road in sections. As to roads in the rural districts the grade may be altered or they may be widened or such other changes as may be necessary may be made, but no such arbitrary changes can be made of streets and highways in cities, boroughs and towns.

Contracts for sections of the road are to be let as contracts for state highways are now let, after advertisement.

New roads may be laid out where none now exist and ground for them may be acquired by condemnation. Damages may be recovered by legal proceedings for ground so taken or for toll roads, bridges or other property which may be taken.

No electric or steam road may occupy any portion of the highway outside of cities and towns, nor may any such railway cross the highway at grade outside of cities and towns. Railways occupying roads which may be taken as links in the highway, however, cannot be arbitrarily forced off, but the Highway Commissioner may contract with them for their removal.

Maintenance of the road, after rebuilding, is to be in charge of the Highway Department.

HARRISBURG LETTER

Brief Report of Work at the State Capital.

Harrisburg, March 3.—The two houses of the Legislature adjourned this morning over the inauguration and will reconvene Monday night with a big program ahead. The members will not attend the inauguration in a body, although about 150 will leave late tonight for the National Capital. The party has chartered a special train, which will be the headquarters of the members during the day.

The session of today was marked by presentation of a number of bills of general interest, among them one to fix fees of magistrates, aldermen and justices. A bill to prevent mixed marriages also appeared. A large number of bills, among them local option, passed on first reading.

With unanimous approval, the bill to have October 12 set aside as a holiday, to be known as Columbus Day, passed the second reading today. This measure has the support of Italian-Americans of the state and of the Knights of Columbus. It probably will be passed next week.

One of the features of the session has been the number of bills introduced to regulate hunters and hunting. Many of these are meritorious. One of the latest was introduced by Senator Wertz of Cambria County. This provides that all residents of the state must obtain a license from the county treasurer to hunt before engaging in hunting, the license fee to be $1.

His left leg was crushed almost to a pulp and as the services of a physician were not available, a fellow countryman severed the badly injured member.

All went well until Saturday when the stump gave the boy so much pain that a physician was summoned who, upon seeing the wound, ordered that he be sent to the hospital. He was accordingly sent to Altoona and his condition is regarded as quite critical.

CARTOONIST BRADFORD WRITES FAIRY VERSE

Combines With Artist Neill to Produce Children's Feature.

The comic section of the North American for March 7 will contain something altogether new in the way of an entertainment feature for children. It is really surprising that Walter R. Bradford, the North American's prize humorous cartoonist, should develop into a writer of fairy story verse. However, he has done so, and it is said that he has made a remarkable success of it. To illustrate Bradford's version, "The Little Journey of Nip and Tuck," the North American has secured John R. Neill, who is probably the best-known illustrator of children's books in America. Together they have made the prettiest feature ever printed in a comic section of a newspaper. Bradford's verses are light and entertaining and amusing. Neill's pictures are beautiful and attractive.

The North American's object is to give to its patrons something decidedly different from the average coarse comic feature. The management of the paper believes that it has succeeded.

U. S. vs. Europe as a Health Resort

The only advantages possessed by the European resorts are those which depend upon their traditions and reputation, their fashionableness, upon the complete change of scene that in some cases that may give, not merely climatic, but social. Until within the last two decades, they had the further advantage of being more thoroughly organized and prepared for the care of the health seeker in the way of both hotels and sanatoria, and a corps of experienced physicians who were thoroughly familiar with the climate. But this advantage has almost completely disappeared, and there is now scarcely a climate or a region in the United States which does not possess from one to a dozen resorts, colonies, hotels or sanatoria, the larger and better known of which are equipped with an admirable corps of intelligent and well qualified physicians, many of whom have won back their own health in the climate.

Mr. Cleveland's View

In regard to the appointment of J. Sterling Morton as a member of the second Cleveland Cabinet, George F. Parker says in McClure's Magazine.

"In the factional divisions in his state, Mr. Morton had actively opposed Mr. Cleveland's nomination in 1884, and had done so with a good deal of personal bitterness. When this was presented to the President as an argument against Morton's appointment, he threw the charge aside with contempt, saying:

"We cannot afford, in this crisis, when, if ever, such men are needed, to let personal considerations enter into account. Under no circumstances will I allow them to influence my opinion or action."

SIMPLE REMEDY FOR LA GRIFFE

La grippe coughs are dangerous as they frequently develop into pneumonia. Foley's Honey and Tar not only stops the cough but heals and strengthens the lungs so that no serious results need be feared. The genuine Foley's Honey and Tar contains no harmful drugs and is in a yellow package. Refuse substitutes. Ed. D. Heckerman.

White Mountain Cake

One cup butter, 1 1/2 cups sugar, 3 eggs, beaten separately; 1 teaspoonful lemon or vanilla, 1 saltspoonful mace, 3/4 cup milk, 3 cups pastry flour, 1 teaspoonful soda, or 3 level teaspoonfuls baking powder; cream the butter, add the sugar gradually, then yolks of eggs, then flavoring. Reserve 1/4 cup of flour lest the cake be too stiff if all be used; less flour will be required for a thin than a thick loaf. Put the soda and cream of tartar into the remainder of flour, add the milk and flour alternately, a little at a time, and lastly the whites which have been beaten stiff and dry, bake from 40 to 50 minutes in a moderate oven.

Foley's Kidney Remedy will cure any case of kidney or bladder trouble that is not beyond the reach of medicine. Cures backache and irregularities that if neglected might result in Bright's disease or diabetes. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Durable Serge Suits

The white serge coat and skirt—or, rather, cream serge, for there is no white—holds its own with the shirt waist. No other fashion puts these out of commission.

Things to Know

To restore discolored ivory paint it with spirits of turpentine and lay it in the sunshine for two or three days.

A little kerosene added to the wash water is said to make the clothes extra white.

Do not put turnips in to cook in large pieces. It only wastes fuel.

To take old stains from marble mix one gill of soap and oxgall and half a gill of turpentine, and as much fuller's earth as will make a paste, and rub it on the stains. Leave it on for a few days and then wipe off.

Apples cored for baking are delicious filled with orange marmalade and a little butter and sugar.

Save the water in which potatoes have been boiled and use it to wash tarnished brass. It will come out as bright as new.

The Care of the Eyes

When one is using the eyes for close work it is wise to change the focus at intervals and gaze off at a distance; if the distant view is of green mountains and fields it will be most restful. If the air in the room can be frequently changed that will rest the eyes also. One should never use the eyes for study or work before breakfast or after the strength has been reduced by disease or a nervous strain. A book should be held about 18 inches from the eyes. The light for work should be steady and for an entire room diffused rather than spotty.—Harper's Bazaar.

A SIMPLE REMEDY

Hundreds of People in Vicinity Here Will Welcome This Advice, Says Local Druggist.

What will appear very interesting to many people here is the article taken from a New York daily paper, giving a simple prescription, which is said to be a positive remedy for backache or kidney or bladder derangement, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargonone ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

A well-known druggist here at home, when asked regarding this prescription, stated that the ingredients are all harmless, and can be obtained at a small cost from any good prescription pharmacy, or the mixture would be put up if asked to do so. He further stated that while this prescription is often prescribed in rheumatic affections with splendid results, he could see no reason why it could not be a splendid remedy for kidney and urinary troubles and backache, as it has a peculiar action upon the kidney structure, cleansing these most important organs and helping them to sift and filter from the blood the foul acids and waste matter which cause sickness and suffering. Those of our readers who suffer can make no mistake in giving it a trial.

Why Our Teeth Decay

The modern method of making bread, whereby the coarser elements are extracted to render it white and soft; the habit of eating it comparatively new; highly seasoned, thoroughly cooked, softened food, and absence from diet of such hard teeth-cleaning things as raw apples, nuts, etc., are all conducive to dental caries.

Dental caries is the most prevalent of all the diseases from which civilized man suffers; an extensive examination of skulls of the ancients reveals the fact that while caries was not unknown even in those days it did not exist in anything approaching the extent seen today. That the primal cause of caries is microbic has been proven without a doubt. There are 14 different bacteria which take an active part in the production of dental decay. Proper dieting will go far toward prevention. But it must be diet for the teeth as well as the stomach. Food strong in lime properties should be the main structure, including drinkables. Begin with children. Apples, nuts, crusts, hard foods, should be eaten from the earliest possible age.

Itching piles provoke profanity, but profanity won't cure them. Doan's Ointment cures itching, bleeding or protruding piles after years of standing. At any drug store.

Producing Sweet Sleep

The girl who sleeps as though she was suffocating will waken the next morning with tired lines in her face and with circles beneath her eyes. The room must be cool and sweet and the bed clothing must be just warm enough.

To lull the tired one to slumber there is nothing like the odor of lavender flowers.

The sheets and pillow cases should be kept in lavender, and on very stifling nights the strongest of the sheets, those that have laid directly upon the lavender pads, should be brought out and spread upon the bed.

WHEEZER OR SNEEZER?

Have You Heard of Hyomei for Catarrh, Asthma and Hay Fever?

If you wheeze or sneeze, hawk or spit, snuffle or blow, something is the matter with the membrane of your respiratory tract, and you need Hyomei.

And you need Hyomei because it will cure you of any catarrhal or inflammatory condition that exists.

It isn't a stomach medicine, or spray, or douche, but a very pleasant, healing, antiseptic balsam, from the eucalyptus forests of Australia. You breathe this balsamic air through a small, hard rubber inhaler, and it reaches every nook, corner and crevice of the membrane, and promptly kills the catarrh germs.

F. W. Jordan will sell you a complete Hyomei (pronounced High-o-mei) outfit for $1, on the moneyback plan.

"The use of Hyomei cured Mr. Cutler of catarrh in 1904. He has strongly endorsed the use of Hyomei in many instances, and we are glad to go on record regarding this marvelous catarrh cure, and endorse it."—Mrs. A. Cutler, 201 Post Ave., Battle Creek, Mich.

Where Was the Deacon?

Deacon Jones, the great man of a little village of Massachusetts, whose outward piety was of the vociferous order, but whose charity toward his fellowmen was not as abundant as it might have been, was dangerously ill, and his brother deacons, impressed with the custom of issuing bulletins from the sick rooms of prominent individuals, decided to follow the fashion with the following results:

"6 p. m. Deacon Jones is in a serious condition."

"7 p. m. Deacon Jones has rallied slightly."

"9 p. m. Deacon Jones has suffered a relapse."

"11 p. m. Deacon Jones has departed for heaven."

Thus the bulletins read at midnight; but early in the morning some unregenerate mortal who did not love the deacon, evidently passed that way, for the light of a new day showed curious townspeople the later report:

"Heaven. 7 a. m. Great consternation here. Deacon Jones has not arrived."—Woman's Home Companion for March.

Single Pleats for Shoulders

The blouse of this season is so devoid of blousiness that it would not be amiss to call it a strait-jacket.

A single pleat at the point of the shoulder, a stretch of the material drawn across the bust, with the tiniest tucks at the waist line, that add practically no fullness whatever, is what the blouse shirtwaist is today.

The back is a counterpart of the front so far as plainness goes.

The sleeves are long and plain, the collars high. They are made of embroidered bastiste, all-over, tucked net and all-over lace, in coarse and fine weaves.

How can any person risk taking some unknown cough remedy when Foley's Honey and Tar costs them no more? It is a safe remedy, contains no harmful drugs, and cures the most obstinate coughs and colds. Why experiment with your health? Insist upon having the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Woods Liver Medicine is a liver regulator which brings quick relief to sick headache, constipation, biliousness and other symptoms of liver disorders. Particularly recommended for Jaundice, Chills, Fever, Malaria. The $1 size contains 2 1/2 times as much as the 50c size. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Colored Embroideries

On white frocks and muslin blouses that are being early made up for spring, there is a plentiful showing of colored embroidery.

The shops offer a large variety of it, and promise that it will be in first style all through the warm weather season. It will be especially popular on wash shirtwaists that fasten down the front and are to be worn every day.

Violet in two or three shades is quite to the front, and its rivals are pale blue, jade green and cobalt blue. The latter is quite effective, and gives a good touch to a dark blue suit. The embroidery comes in edging and insertion.

Foley's Honey and Tar cures coughs quickly, strengthens the lungs and expels colds. Get the genuine in a yellow package. Ed. D. Heckerman.

For Centerpieces and Dollies

Those who have a number of nice centerpieces of Battenberg or embroidered linen that measure up to thirty-six inches or more, and have to fold them to put into a drawer, know what trouble it is to always press them, when wanted for use. A wooden curtain-pole, covered with a layer of cotton and then one of white linen, makes an excellent roll for centerpieces, and enables you to put them away without creasing. The pole should be an inch or more longer than the largest centerpiece. Several pieces may be put on one roll. Use a cover of gray linen, which ties four times with pink ribbons. Two loops of ribbon are sewed at the ends of the case, and it can be hung up. For small centerpieces or dollies, make a book of heavy water-color paper, with cardboard cover. It may be covered with embroidered linen and tied with ribbon, or it can be of heavy cream-colored collar canvas painted in oil colors and bound with ribbon.—The Ladies' World for March.

"My three-year-old boy was badly constipated, had a high fever and was in an awful condition. I gave him two doses of Foley's Orino Laxative and the next morning the fever was gone and he was entirely well. Foley's Orino Laxative saved his life. A. Wolkush, Casimer, Wis." Ed. D. Heckerman.

The Natural, Palatable Tonic Builder

At no time of the year is a tonic, flesh builder, blood thickener and tissue maker so needed as in winter. A cold contracted now usually runs all winter, to the cost of health and strength. Persons—School Children—exposed to the outer air need just such a tonic to give power and warmth to the blood. To strengthen the body, feed the tissues, warm the blood, and make healthy flesh, there's nothing quite like

DEMOCRATS IN TAIT'S CABINET

Whatever may now be the political affiliations of two members of the new cabinet, Franklin MacVeagh of Illinois and Jacob M. Dickinson of Tennessee, they are, at heart, essentially Democrats. Concerning the views they held the New York World of recent date said:

"Both are revenue-tariff men. Both are constitutionally opposed to excessive governmental activity. Both are hostile to centralization and to imperialism. Both have a strict regard for old-fashioned ideas of economy and simplicity. Both hate the very idea of privilege and favor. Both believe that the freedom, security and happiness of the people have their best guarantees in the preservation of the dignity and authority of the states. Both can be quoted in proof of all these things."

CAPT. JOSIAH HISSONG

On Cold Harbor Battlefield—Inspecting Erection of Monument.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28, 1909. Editor Gazette:—Thinking a few items from "Dixie" and from one of your oldest correspondents, whose business called him to this section of this great United States for a week or two, would be interesting, I here-with pen you a few. I left Bedford on Monday, February 22, at 11 a. m., and landed at Richmond at 9 o'clock p. m., having made close connections at Cumberland and Washington. I was conveyed by cab to Murphy's Hotel, one of the greatest and largest hotels in the United States, covering the greater part of two squares. It is a fine place to stop; everything first-class. It poured rain on Tuesday and Wednesday, which delayed the work on the soldiers' monument which is being erected in the National Cemetery at Cold Harbor. Your correspondent is one of the members of the Cold Harbor Battlefield Commission, appointed by Governor Stuart, and is one of the Construction Committee to look after the interests of the state and the commission. I went to the National Cemetery on Wednesday in company with the contractor, J. Henry Brown, a former resident of West Chester, and found the foundation dug out according to specifications, awaiting my inspection. It was quite a hole in the ground and took 8,500 pounds of the best Portland cement, which was one-fourth of the mixture of concrete, to fill it. We are now ready and will commence the erection of the monument on Monday, March 1, which will take nearly a ton more cement. If the rain doesn't interfere, we expect to have the monument erected by Thursday, March 4. I am here alone, none of my colleagues being able to attend, two on account of sickness and one on account of business matters. All have written me to go ahead and they will concur with whatever I do. The fourth member, Captain Hodge of Swissvale, I expect in on any train.

The weather now is beautiful and this beautiful city is looking grand. Flowers are in bloom, people are working in the garden and getting ready to plant corn. Acres of onions, cabbage, beans and peas can be seen growing all along the roads. In fact, it is summer; the mornings are a little fresh. Flies are plenty and moths are thick at night.

I will go out to the cemetery tomorrow, then can arrange my plans for the inspection about Friday next, and give notice by telegram to my colleagues. The responsibility is rather greater than I care about, but the work of the foundation is so satisfactory and the material and workmanship of the monument so good that I am sure no complaint could be made if all were here. The people are very kind and courteous; I have been interviewed by a great many, especially by the Confederate veterans.

I was four years and two months in the service and our forces were trying to get into Richmond from all sides 44 years ago but failed; I was a long time and escaped being made a prisoner. Monday evening I had no trouble in getting into Richmond, and Friday evening I was surprised and made a prisoner by a squad of R. E. Lee's Camp of Confederate veterans and escorted to their camp, one of the finest lodge rooms I ever had the pleasure of looking at. They take great delight in getting all the paintings of the great Confederate generals. Some are presented to them but a great many are bought by them, large sums of money being paid. The camp numbers near six hundred. I spent two hours about as pleasantly as time could be spent. This hotel appears to be headquarters for everybody. Conventions are being held in the hall of the hotel almost daily. Col. John Murphy, assisted by his two sons and son-in-law, with their corps of well trained servants, makes life pleasant for all guests. Captain Corwin, superintendent of the National Cemetery at Cold Harbor, is a New York veteran and takes a great interest in keeping the cemetery in nice condition and delights in showing his guests around. The people living around the cemetery are waking up and repairing and painting their houses, cutting out unsightly hedges and fence rows in anticipation of a large crowd at the dedication of the monument. I could write a great deal more but will call a halt for this time. Yours respectfully, Hooker.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

Fair Local Option Bill

As a matter of information to many readers of The Gazette who may as yet not have given the Fair Local Option Bill, now pending in the Legislature, due consideration because of misunderstanding the real issue involved, a word of explanation at this time may not be amiss.

Local Option is not a question of prohibition, neither is it a factional issue, as many have been misled to believe. It is simply the method by which the people themselves and not the legislators determine whether or not they want saloons to continue in their communities, and the only question for the Legislature to consider is that of permitting the people to decide for themselves upon the subject. In other words it is a right now being withheld from the people which the people have a right to demand and are demanding most vigorously.

Under the "Fair Bill" no township, borough or city ward would take a vote until 25 per cent of the qualified electors within that district should petition therefor.

It, when the vote is taken and all evidence favorable or unfavorable to the continued existence of the saloon has been presented, a majority of the voters decide against the saloon, who is there that would affirm that the people should not be permitted to enjoy the privilege for which a majority of them desire to vote?

It is a most reasonable proposition, deserving the support of all loyal citizens both within and without the Legislature. Let all see the justice of home-rule in this great issue, and in the strength of manhood redeem our beloved Keystone state from the destruction which threatens her!

Want Foot Bridge

Residents of the western section of the town and others desiring to reach the P. R. R. depot by crossing at Thomas Street are much inconvenienced by the absence of a bridge over the run at that point. Some time ago the old foot bridge was removed because portions of it had been carried away by high water and it was no longer safe, it was not replaced, however. Why, we do not know. The swinging bridge over the Raystown Branch is still in good repair but is of little use when one cannot cross the run some distance away. Why cannot we have a bridge at this point? To reach the depot citizens of this section must go two, three and more squares out of their way in order to cross. When the swinging bridge was erected many were generous in their contributions and would no doubt assist in erecting a foot bridge if the borough would take some action. By all means, let us have it.

ALTOONA TO PITTSBURG

Captain Statler Plays Engineer—A Thrilling Adventure.

In my former article I dealt principally with the duty of Co. I, 5th Regt., N. G. P.; in this I will tell my experience from the time I left Altoona until I arrived at Gallitzin.

When the conference with the officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, during the night of July 24-25, was over and it was decided to take an engine from the roundhouse, I told the officials I would much rather they would get one of their own men to run the engine, and gave them until the morning of July 25 at 8:30 o'clock to get an engineer or a competent fireman to run the engine, and if at the end of that time they did not succeed I would take an engine from the roundhouse, regardless of consequences. I knew it was a daring piece of business to undertake this under the circumstances, but somebody had to do it for the troops in Pittsburgh were in a desperate condition—no rations and no ammunition to defend themselves against the mob surrounding them, who were ready at any moment to close in upon and annihilate them because of superior numbers.

John Riley, the superintendent of transportation, tried all the night of July 24-25 but failed to secure anyone to run the engine, from among all the engineers and firemen of the Pittsburgh and Middle divisions of the road.

Superintendent Riley and myself having private signals, at 8:30 o'clock a. m. he gave me the signal and I in turn gave it to Samuel Herman, a member of Co. I, who was one of the firemen. We had an extra fireman, a member of the 12th Regt. After the signal was given we scattered in different directions. All had the number of the engine. When I got within 20 feet of the engine I started on a run and both firemen closed in with a rush. I jumped aboard, caught the throttle with one hand, threw open the cylinder cocks, grabbed the bell rope with the other hand and started out of the roundhouse at a pretty rapid pace. Just before getting out of the yard or gate to the roundhouse a man started to run rapidly across ahead of the engine. I saw his purpose at once. There was a short sliding close and I intended to turn me into it. It would hold up an engine and tender and at the pace I was going, had he succeeded, I could not have stopped the engine on such short notice and the result would have been that the engine would have gone straight through the fence and out across the main tracks where it would have been wrecked. This man nearly lost his life by his rashness. When I saw him and his purpose I pulled the throttle wide open and the engine shot ahead very rapidly and came within an ace of running him down.

When we pulled out on the main track bedlam broke loose. At first they did not know who I was, but finally someone recognized me and called out, "It is Captain Statler from Bedford." I was called all the vile names they could lay their tongues to, and threats were hurled at me, such as—"We'll lay for you," "Bring your coffin along when you come back," "You'll never live to get through Gallitzin tunnel," etc.

At 9 o'clock the gong sounded and the signal was given to start. My parting words to the strikers was, "Barking dogs never bite." When about a mile above Altoona I saw three men standing at the top of the first cut and noticed the head of a fourth man protruding just over the top of a large rock that would weigh a ton or two. My guard of 18 men who rode on the tank of the engine had their attention called to those above the cut. They all stood up, their guns loaded with ball cartridges. The Sergeant in charge called out that if they made a move they would be riddled with bullets. The strikers stood as if petrified. News of this was wired to Altoona and men were sent to remove the stone from the side of the cut, where it had been rolled for the purpose of wrecking the engine when just below it.

A little farther up the grade another demonstration was made. A lot of old ties were piled on the track, and a couple hundred men from a furnace close by gave vent to their feelings by calling us all sorts of vile names, wishing the whole train would be wrecked and all killed, and especially the engineer.

The next incident to take place was at the famous Horse Shoe Curve. When approaching the curve a man appeared on the track moving his hat to and fro as a signal to stop. I whistled "down breast" and came to a full stop. A skirmish line was sent forward to determine what was the matter. When the line advanced the man disappeared into the bushes. The line advanced clear around the curve and examined the track but found nothing wrong. They returned and got aboard the car and then is where my fun came. Three times we started with both engines with a full head of steam and each time we stuck on the curve. The fourth time I called back to the second engineer that we would have to full stroke both engines around the curve, which we both did, and I thought, with the heavy train we were hauling and with the full stroke, it would tear the drivers out from under my engine. Any engineer knows that full stroking an engine with a heavy load should only be done in extreme cases. Herman said to me, "My God, Cap, as fast as I throw coal into the firebox you throw it out the stack." We finally got around the curve and I dropped her back a notch or two.

One thing the strikers said to me before leaving Altoona was that I knew nothing about carrying water in a boiler on a heavy grade and that I would blow her up before I got very far. About a mile on this side of Gallitzin tunnel the track was obstructed again with ties and one tie was chained to the rails. After passing this obstruction is when I told Herman about the report of the tunnel's being mined, of which I spoke in my former article. The reader can certainly have an idea how our nerves were strung to the highest pitch in going through that tunnel with that report in circulation.

In another article I will give a description of our trip from Gallitzin through Johnstown, Latrobe, Greensburg and on to Pittsburgh.

S. F. Statler.

Note.—In my former article I forgot to state that Capt. H. D. Tate, who was formerly 1st Lieut. of Co. I, 5th Regt., was promoted to Commissary of the 5th Regt. with rank of Captain, accompanied me to Altoona on Sunday, July 21, 1877. Few men who had the ties to keep them at home that bound him to his family at the time would have gone. When I said to his wife "You would rather see him go than have him called a coward?" she said, "Yes, go, Humphrey," and she had a six weeks' old baby in her arms at the time. That is the kind of patriotism I like to see in American women.

LETTER TO W. H. STRAUB

Bedford, Pa.

Dear Sir: A certain paint-manufacturer advertised "Waldorf-Astoria painted throughout with my paint." A part of the basement was so painted; not satisfactory; painted Devco next time.

There's a certain paint, a big concern, very proud and ambitious, that hated to see so big a job of another paint; so it went for that business.

That former paint was about two-thirds not paint, but this proud and ambitious paint was only about one-third not paint. It succeeded in getting a trial: 25 gallons, 5 kits of 5 gallons each.

When the painter had used one kit, he called the manager; not satisfactory; 4 of the kits returned. A paint, one-third not paint, is not good enough to displace Devco.

This was several years ago. That proud and ambitious paint is better now; it is nearer honest; it isn't short-measure at all and only 15 per cent adulterated. It's a pretty-good paint now; 13 or 14 gallons of it goes as far as 10 of Devco.

Judge I. D. Fairchild owns two houses alike in Lufkin, Texas. J. M. Torrence painted both houses, one Devco, and the other with that proud and ambitious adulterated-15-per-cent paint. It took 15½ gallons Devco and 25 gallons of the proud and ambitious paint.

It takes a pretty-good paint to disturb Devco.

Yours truly

F. W. DEVCO & CO.

Easter Rally

The Church of God at Round Knob will hold a Rally on Easter Sunday with services at 2 p. m. An effort is being made to raise the balance of the small indebtedness. The church was dedicated during the strike of 1907, when the mines were shut down, and a debt of nearly $400 remained on the building. Since then work has been very dull in the mines and until recently nothing was done to reduce the debt. An effort is now being made to raise the money by "the dollar plan" and so far it has been with marked success. It is hoped that 350 persons can be secured, each of whom will pay one dollar and thus cancel the entire debt.

RESCUING A CAPTIVE AND SAVING A HERD BY BUFFALO BILL FROM TRUE TALES OF THE PLAINS

stop there, as it was many miles from there to the next water. We decided it was best to keep continuously on the job and as the Indians must make some stop to rest and eat we could overtake them. When the horses were rested, and as we had nothing on hand to eat to delay us and had had nothing since dinner the day before, our best possibility for a meal was to overtake the Indians, surprise them, whip them and capture what dried meat they had.

After leaving the creek the Indians began their old tricks in trying to hide their trail by devices well known to me, but I paid no attention to this, knowing what must be their next stopping place, and I was as familiar with that part of the country as they were. Straight on we kept to the Springs, except that occasionally we went out of the direct line to keep in low places between the sand hills so as not to be seen. At 9 o'clock that night we halted four miles from the Springs. Advising Thomas to allow the men to unsaddle and unbridle, letting each second man hold two horses by their halters, and so let them feed on the grass, changing the men every two hours so they could get some sleep, I disguised myself as an Indian and started off to locate the hostiles and be back in time so as to attack them at daylight. No fires were to be lighted, and all were to be silent until my return. Before I left, half of the tired men of the little band were slumbering. One hour later I had seen the camp, just as I expected, in fancied security, believing that we could not be within a day's march of them.

Crawling back till I could hoof it on the run, I found the boys as I had left them. Quietly they were called to saddle up, instructions were given, men were detailed to pay particular attention to recapturing and rounding up the herd, and others were instructed as to the attack on the camp. I estimated the Indians to number about thirty, and there were forty-two of us. Ten were to creep up to the sleeping Indians on foot and be ready to work in open order. Twenty, besides the lieutenant and myself, were to charge on horseback. The rest were to bring up the remaining horses, attack the herd, and round up the entire herd. We attacked at break of day, and the whole scheme worked well. The tired lot were surprised when awakened to meet their foes. Nine of them were sent to sleep forever. Many had kept their war horses near them, and, hastily mounting, they escaped with several picked horses from our band. Among them was one of my favorite war horses, Powder Face, which one of them who probably knew him had appropriated for his own use.

As soon as the fight was over and I saw that we had captured some of their herd as well as our own I saw that Powder Face was not with them, but I recognized him half a mile away, his rider heading for the hills. This made me hot, and, knowing that the Indians would think others were following me, I dashed after them. Old Buckskin Joe soon began to gain, and I got near enough for a shot. My first shot killed the horse that an Indian was riding alongside of Powder Face, and his rider was soon up behind in the usual manner they try to save a warrior, riding backward, shooting at me with his revolver. Powder Face was as swift as Joe. Being in the rough sand hills and having a double weight to carry, Joe in a few minutes got me near enough for a good shot. I kept closing on them, as I did not want to hit my old friend Powder Face. When I thought it sure as they were riding up over a mound I fired. The Indians fell, the one bullet going through both, and when Powder Face heard my voice he ran toward me whinnying, and, with two of the boys who had been ordered to follow close behind me by the lieutenant, we returned to the camp in high glee. They found a lot of dried buffalo and deer meat and some fresh antelope and deer, with accompanying pepper and salt and copious drafts of spring water, so a few minutes' rejoicing was had. A detail was quickly made up to bury the dead, and as we had but three slightly wounded and five horses knocked out the enthusiasm can hardly be described.

HECKERMAN LETTER

A Visit to Staunton, Va.—The World's Prayer.

Staunton, Va., March 3, 1909. This beautiful city of over 14,000 people lies in the very heart of the great Valley of Virginia, said to be one of the most fertile valleys in the country. This is a great wheat growing section and the immense wheat fields look so nice and green now that one is led to believe spring has come; in fact I have seen some robins and other birds. There are two railroads here, the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Baltimore and Ohio; the latter has less than 100 miles in the state, which fact gives the road the right to charge three cents a mile and I tell you this three cent bill adds much to a man's expense account.

This is a great educational centre, there being two large female seminaries; the Episcopal has about 200 students while the Presbyterian has 300, and some one said that they were all fine looking girls. There are now on the roll 375 boys and young men here attending the military school; some, and in fact many, of these students come from the eastern states. Dunsmore's business college with another hundred and fifty is here, and these are not all, for the state has a home for the deaf and blind and some four hundred are cared for in this home, while over 1,100 are in the insane hospital. This is called the Western State Hospital. The buildings and grounds are as fine as any. At present they are building a high school or college for colored folks at a cost of $25,000. Almost all church denominations are represented here. There are four banks where you can borrow money at five per cent. Also the largest roller mill in the South; in this they make 600 barrels of flour per day.

Somehow the fame of the organs that are built here has been told abroad, for they ship them to every civilized nation under the sun. There are many minor factories here, all of which are making money right along.

Baker and Brown are a very old wholesale grocery house. 'Twas formerly Baker Bros. These two began the wholesale business here 40 years ago and have continued at it ever since, not however without seeing the shekels pile high, for luck, if there be such a thing, has followed them all the while, and you never met a more affable man than the present Mr. Baker who has so nobly piloted this big business all these years. The next is R. L. Stratton and Co. Mr. Stratton is not very large or heavy, but what he lacks in size and weight is more than made up in his ability as a business man. He has raised a large family of noble children, and while doing this has managed most successfully the large wholesale grocery business which bears his name. If you or any of your readers come here and want to be posted as to anything pertaining to the good of Staunton go to see Mr. Stratton.

The B. & O. R. has a line about a hundred miles long in Virginia and they have the poorest roadbed and old cars, and then charge more than other well-equipped roads. I was on one of their trains bound for Harrisonville the other day, when at a place several miles from this town a most singular accident occurred. The train struck a live pig; the pilot of the engine was all twisted out of shape and rendered useless, but the pig escaped with its life. However from the manner in which the pilot was damaged it would have been no wonder had the whole train been ditched. When the passengers learned what had caused the delay, some one said: "Well, I hope it was that lying groundhog." "But it wasn't," said another, "for the wheels did not pass over him; therefore, it was not a ground hog."

If ever you come this way in your touring car, you must pass by Mt. Crawford on the other side, as there is a small potato of a constable in this town of thirty-seven and a half houses strung out for half a mile, who owns a stop watch, and it is the greatest liar when in his hands that ever was. In that insignificant village they have an ordinance about speeding faster than a snail can gallop. This same constable sits out all day to catch those who may, according to his watch, violate this city ordinance. He starts and stops this remarkable watch at will and says by phone, "Stop car No. so and so and bring the owner before me." For doing all this he gets, I was told, sixty-two and a half cents a day, and should the day be cold, has his poor wife carrying him hot bricks every fifteen minutes. To be sure of his sixty-two and a half cents he will swear seventeen times a day that the prisoner has exceeded the speed limit.

The World's Prayer.

Here is the world's prayer that I referred to last week as written by Dr. Greene.

"Oh, almighty dollar, our acknowledged governor, preserver and benefactor, we desire to approach thee on this and on every occasion with that regard which should ever be cherished for exalted greatness! We bless thee, almighty dollar, for without thee we can do nothing, but with thee all things are made possible. When sickness lays its palsy hand upon us, thou canst provide for us the tenderest of nurses, the most skillful physicians; and when the last struggle of mortality is over and we are borne to the resting place of the dead, thou canst provide a band of music and a military escort to accompany us thither; and last but not least, erect a monument over our grave with a lying epitaph to perpetuate our memories. We feel that there is no true condition in life where thy potent and powerful charms are not felt. In thy absence how gloomy is the household and desolate the hearthstone; but when thou, almighty dollar, art with us, how gleefully the beefsteak sings on the gridiron—how genial the warmth of a nice coal fire and what an exuberance of joy swells our bosoms! Thou art the joy of our youth and the solace of our old age; thou canst adorn the gentlemen and thou feedest the jackass; thou art the favorite of the philosopher and the idol of the lunkhead. Great, almighty dollar, thou art worshipped the world over; thou hast no hypocrites at thy altar or

JUNE 18, 1869, under General Eugene A. Carr, saw us hunting for a band of Indian "dog soldiers" who were, like the Irishman's flea, here, there and at times everywhere.

Nebraska, Colorado and Kansas were all excited over the depredations of these renegades. They had ordered right and left, had captured several hundred mules and horses and destroyed wagon trains, as we could tell by the trail of some shod animals. What intensified our desire to punish or capture them was the fact that they had some white captives—Mrs. Alderdice whose husband and children they had killed, and Mrs. Weigel, whose husband and family had also been massacred, and these two women were known to be still alive with them.

At last we got on their trail and had almost daily skirmishes, and General Carr decided to use some stratagem so see if we could not get them in a tight place. He consulted with me, and after a day of continual skirmishing and a night attack he ordered a retrograde movement, which created a good deal of discussion between the officers and men at the time. Apparently abandoning the pursuit, he retired as if going back to the fort, and in two or three days, as he surmised, the Indians were nowhere to be seen, having come to the conclusion that we were disheartened and that they could with impunity take a little repose themselves. This was exactly what our wily commander desired, as he intended to retrace his steps and catch them sleeping. So, being sure that there were no Indians in sight, he packed all the grub possible on the mules, burned the wagons, and immediately started to make forced marches in their direction.

As I had surmised, they were heading for Summit Springs, a few miles south of the Platte river and among the sand hills, which formed a beautiful little oasis, as it were, for a camp ground. Striking their trail by judging from their daily campfires, we made in one day the same distance that they made in three, but when near the Springs, as we saw the trail getting fresher, we covered four of their day's journeyings, with all their impedimenta and village outfit, in one day and landed at the opportune moment ready for business, while the enemy had been thrown off their guard and gave us an opening that resulted so gloriously that this battle is recognized as having been one of the most effective in the early breaking of the power of the red man on the plains.

In "Carr's Campaigns" General Carr writes:

"On Sunday, July 11, 1869, I was thinking of going to the river to water my horses when 'Buffalo Bill' came back and said: 'I have seen the village. It is over a ridge, away from the river valley.' We had not seen the trail for some time. They had followed an old custom of trailing along the ridge where we had dismounted to cross it, and going over the high ground, so that any one following them would be visible from camp. Cody's idea was to get around, beyond and between them and the river. He changed horses quickly and went on, and I took to the gallop for several miles through the deep sand and got to the top of a sand hill or mound. Some Pawnees away off to the left on the bluff beckoned me, and I went. The Pawnees pointed over the ridge and said, 'Hoss, hoss.' I saw what looked like a band of ponies, but said, 'No, buffalo.' They said, 'No, no; hoss, hoss.' They took my glasses and looked and said, 'Yes, hoss.' I looked, and, sure enough, they were ponies grazing, and the camp no doubt was below. I permitted the Pawnees, as was their custom, to strip and take off their saddles and all their uniforms, but to keep on their drawers, so as to be recognized as friendly. I had sent word to Colonel Royal, and he sent up Major Walker's company and came on with the rest. I placed the Pawnees on the left and two companies of the Fifth cavalry in the center and one of Captain Price's on the right. I told Major Eugene Crittenden to take command of the center and I would take the reserve and send up reinforcements as required.

"I shot him off his horse and got the animal."

"When we all got started I told the bugler behind me to sound 'the charge,' and we were among the enemy before they had any idea that we were within a thousand miles. Then I heard the rattling of rifles on the right and left, plainly distinguishing the basso sound of 'Buffalo Bill's' trusty rifle, old 'Lucretia Borgia'.

"'Buffalo Bill' got pretty well around the village when he went in on Captain Price's right. As he advanced he saw a chief on a horse charging about and haranguing his men. He and his party laid for him, and as he came nearer 'Buffalo Bill' shot him off his horse and got the animal. This was the celebrated race horse Tall Bull, which he (Cody) rode for a long time and with it won many exciting races. When he came into camp Mrs. Tall Bull said that it was her husband's horse, leaving no doubt about the fact that 'Buffalo Bill' had killed the chief.

"On this occasion the Indians had two white captives—Mrs. Alderdice of Missouri, whom they killed during the fight, and Mrs. Weigel of Kansas, who had been shot in the back with a pistol bullet, which broke a rib, but was deflected and passed around and lodged below her left breast. Fifteen hundred dollars in gold, silver and green backs, which was gathered in the camps, was given her, and she went back, remarried and 'proved up' her claim. Next morning we dug a grave on a hill above the village and buried Mrs. Alderdice, the surgeon reading the service.

"I detailed a board of officers to count the dead Indians, and notwithstanding that it is their custom to carry away the wounded and to hide or bury the dead we found sixty-eight dead bodies on the field."

As chief of scouts under General Phil Sheridan, I and the men were resting at Fort McPherson after a hazardous expedition and a long and successful chase. It was a quiet June evening, and we were enjoying refreshing breezes. A detail had left the fort to water the government herd of horses and mules in the nearby Platte river when shots were heard. Every one was on his feet in a moment, for it was learned that a party of Sioux Indians had dashed from the cottonwood trees, shooting, shouting and waving blankets, and had stamped a herd of about 400 animals. The Indians had killed two of the herders and wounded another. Some of the herd ran for the corral, where they were accustomed to go for the night, but the Indians got away with about 200 and started for the bluffs south of the fort. All was excitement, but, as was my custom, I had my war horse, "Old Buckskin Joe," near at hand and was mounted in time to make a reconnaissance and note the direction in which the Indians had disappeared with the government stock.

General William H. Emory had his bugler sound the "boots and saddles," and by the time I returned for instructions five troops of cavalry were busy saddling up, getting their arms, ammunition and some supplies. One company—I, Fifth United States cavalry—were the first troops saddled and ready for the chase. Their officer, a young lieutenant by the name of Earl D. Thomas, now Brigadier General Thomas and in command of the department of Colorado, was just out from West Point, full of ambition and delighted to be in command in the absence of his superiors. General Emory and myself agreed on the necessity of quick action, and to the delight of young Thomas, he was ordered with his troop to follow me, while the other troops as soon as ready would follow.

"Fours right! Trot! Gallop!" And we dashed off. We followed at a gallop until dark, but did not get a sight of the Indians, and the tracks showed that they were whooping it up on the run. A halt was called to give the puffing horses a rest, and Thomas consulted me. His orders were to follow and recapture the animals. I told Thomas I could follow the trail at night if necessary and awaited his answer. "I will follow you, Mr. Cody, as I was told to do so, and I will go wherever you propose." After a short rest, "Mount and forward!" was the order, and the chase was continued. During the night the Indians repeatedly doubled on their trail. We did not reach Medicine creek, where we got water for men and horses, until 11 o'clock the next day.

The trail showed that the Indians were headed southwest, in the direction of Red Willow Springs. Knowing that there was no water between Medicine creek and the Red Willow, I was sure that the Indians would make a false hearts in thy temples; kings and beggars alike bow before thee; and all nations adore thee; thou art loved by the civilized and savage alike with unfeigned and unfeeling affection; thou hast bound continents together by telegraph cables and made the varied products of our country available to all by a perfect network of railroads. We regard thee as the handmaid of religion, the twin sister of charity. Oh! almighty dollar, be with us, we beseech thee, attended by an inexpressible number of ministering angels, made in thine own image; even though they be but silver quarters whose gladdening light shall illuminate the vale of penury and want with heavenly radiance, which shall cause the awakened soul to break forth in acclamations of joy. Thou, almighty dollar, art the awakener of our energies, the guide of our foot steps. In closing this invocation, permit us to possess thee in abundance and in all thy varied excellencies, is our constant and unwavering prayer."

Home: Beegle of this place left for Berlin where he has secured employment.

We are having very wet weather at present.

Miss Carrie Shaffer of Frostburg was the guest of her sister, Mrs. W. L. Van Ormer, part of this week.

Co. Supt. Barker made a visit to the schools at this place on Tuesday.

Hot Scotch.

The young wife dipped the ladle into the porridge and smiled inquiringly at the overnight guest.

"Will you have some hot Scotch, Mr. Dash?" she asked.

"Dash Scotch?" Where is it?" said he.

"Why, here, of course," said the young wife in a perplexed tone.

"Didn't you know that oatmeal is called hot Scotch?"

"Er—!" Dash stammered, and then the young husband caught his eye, and he was silent.

"I didn't know it myself till last year," she explained. "I heard George talking his cousin over the telephone to meet him at the office and have a hot Scotch. I didn't know what hot Scotch was till you told me, did I, George?"

George, very red, answered huskily: "No, my dear."

Laughing at her own ignorance, the lady proceeded to serve the thick, pale hot Scotch—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The vicissitudes of Leonardo da Vinci's picture, "Last Supper," reminds a correspondent of the strange experiences of Holbein's "Field of the Cloth of Gold," which may be seen any day at Hampton Court palace. After the downfall of Charles I., Cromwell in order to raise funds proposed the sale of certain pictures, this among the number. The bargain was already made, but when the would be purchaser came to inspect Holbein's masterpiece he discovered that the head of Henry VIII. had been cut from the canvas. He naturally withdrew his offer, and the picture was preserved to the nation. On the restoration a nobleman confessed to having committed the theft for love of art and his country, and he returned the missing head, which now occupies its original position in the canvas. The circle made by the knife is still plainly visible—London Chronicle.

Colored Cotton Crepe

Since white cotton crepe for blouses has so taken the popular fancy, the dyers have got hold of it, and it is now offered for sale in gray, black, violet, two shades of blue and peach pink.

Time to Go.

"I wonder how many of those connected with newspapers," said a reporter, "remember the famous dispatch sent by a press telegraph operator at the time of the San Francisco earthquake. It was the only smile in the whole horrible catastrophe. It read something like this: 'The building is beginning to rock, bricks are falling about, and it's me for the simple life.' Then it trailed off as if the operator had scooted for the open door, or wall, perhaps. This dispatch was handed about the newspaper offices and made all the boys laugh in spite of the serious picture it called to mind.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Reasons For Cannibalism.

According to a writer in a French review, there are three causes for cannibalism. It is due either to necessity, pleasure or fashion. Twenty per cent of the cannibals, we learn, eat their dead to honor them. The ancient Egyptians belonged to this class. This is sentimental anthropophagy. Nineteen per cent eat their great warriors to obtain their courage. This is designated egoistic anthropophagy. Twenty-nine per cent eat human flesh to punish their enemies and 22 per cent because it is the fashion or because they consider the flesh savory.—In Danubius News.

Fat Singers—Why?

A medical gentleman writing in Comedix explains that the physical massiveness of the majority of famous singers comes mainly from abnormal development of the lungs. We must confess that we had been under the impression that it was due to a laudable effort to make grand opera amusing.—Fun.

He who foresees calamities suffers in a false one—Porteus.

This is the most dangerous time of the year to catch cold, and it is the hardest time to cure it. If you should take a cold a few doses of Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup will act very promptly. Its laxative principle cures the cold by driving it from the system by a gentle but natural action of the bowels. Children especially like Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup, as it tastes so good, nearly like maple sugar. It is sold by all druggists.

Consumption

is, by no means, the dreadful disease it is thought to be—in the beginning.

It can always be stopped—in the beginning. The trouble is: you don't know you've got it; you don't believe it; you won't believe it—till you are forced to. Then it is dangerous.

Don't be afraid; but attend to it quick—you can do it yourself and at home. Take

The Ghost of the Abbey

Is a New Serial Story and was written by Gertrude Warden. It will be published in The Philadelphia Press, and the first chapters will appear Sunday, March 7th.

It is an interesting and fascinating Ghost Story and tells all about ghosts and is full of hair-raising experiences.

The story grows more intensely interesting from chapter to chapter. It will be published exclusively in The Philadelphia Press. Order your paper in advance to be sure you will not miss the opening chapters, for there will be an extra demand on this Sunday.

A Religious Author's Statement

Rev. Joseph H. Pesperman, Salisbury, N. C., who is the author of several books, writes: "For several years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and last winter I was suddenly stricken with a severe pain in my kidneys and was confined to bed eight days unable to get up without assistance. My urine contained a thick, white sediment and I passed same frequently day and night. I commenced taking Foley's Kidney Remedy and the pain gradually abated and finally ceased and my urine became normal. I cheerfully recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy." Ed. D. Heckerman.

The Visit of an Old Friend

Today the editor received a copy of that reliable seedsmen's catalogue, Vick's Garden and Floral Guide. It was a look at the face of an old friend, and was hailed with joy. The Guide improves with age; the illustrations are up-to-date photo-engravings, finely printed, and are direct reproductions from nature. The Vegetables and Flowers in colors on the covers are so attractive that one day's opening the book—but when it is opened the pleasure is only increased. The Corn, Lettuce, Onions, Radish and Peas are superb, and the Asters, Poppies, Petunias and Sweet Peas, are—well, just write to James Vick's Sons, 143 Main St., Rochester, N. Y., for a copy. The Heart Can't Stand Rheumatic Acid Poisoning

The Uric-O Treatment Expels the Poison From the Blood.

Those sharp, shooting pains through the chest around the region of the heart mean that poisonous uric and rheumatic acid are there ready to spring and up tightly the muscles controlling the heart's action. Don't neglect these warnings. You must neutralize and drive those dangerous poisons from the system, or sooner or later they will overcome you.

The only true way to cure Rheumatism is to get it at its source from the inside with Uric-O. It acts with marvelous swiftness upon the muscles, kidneys and blood. Cleans out the sand-like deposits in the muscles, forces the kidneys to perform those duties for which they were designed and neutralizes the acid within the blood.

Uric-O is a liquid taken internally, 3 times daily, and does not contain any morphine, opium or other so-called "pain deadeners." Sciatica, Muscular, Inflammatory and Articular Rheumatism all yield readily to Uric-O.

It is sold by all druggists for 75c and $1 the bottle or you can obtain a trial bottle free by writing to The Smith Drug Co., 355 Smith Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y.

What Do They Cure?

The above question is often asked concerning Dr. Pierce's two leading medicines, "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription."

The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alternative and blood-purifier, and tonic or invigorator and acts especially favorably in a curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder, curing a large per cent. of catarrhal cases whether the disease affects the nasal passages, the throat, larynx, bronchial tubes (as catarrhal dyspepsia), bowels (as mucous colitis), bladder, uterus or other pelvic organs. Even in the chronic or ulcerated stages of these affections it is often successful in effecting a cure.

The "Favorite Prescription" is a "discovery" for the cure of one class of disease—nervous weakness, originating in the brain, spinal cord, or nerves. It is a powerful, yet gently acting invigorating tonic and nerve. For weak worn-out, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the breakdown, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most effective in building up the strength, restoring the womanly functions, subduing pain and bringing about a healthy, vigorous condition of the whole system.

A book of particulars wraps each bottle giving the formulae of both medicines and giving what scores of eminent medical authors, whose works are consulted by physicians of all the schools of practice as guides in prescribing, say of each ingredient entering into these medicines. The words of praise bestowed on the several ingredients entering into "Doctor Pierce's medicine" by such writers should have more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials, because such men are writing for the guidance of their medical brethren and know whereof they speak.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-secret, and contain no harmful habit-forming drugs, being composed of glyceric extracts of the roots of native, American medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by dealers in medicine. You can't afford to accept as a substitute for one of these medicines of known composition, any secret nostrum.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, small, sugar-coated, easy to take as candy, regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

Value of the Architect.

The members of a country club, the building and decoration of whose clubhouse had been placed entirely in the hands of the architect, even to the minutest furnishings, found themselves in need of new window shades and a few other small household necessities. Instead of buying the things themselves, they sent for the architect to come out and look things over and order appropriate fittings.

"That is not at all an unusual case," said the architect. "I can show you houses that I planned more than twenty-five years ago that have never been furnished with so much as a new chair without my being consulted first. Having deferred entirely to my judgment in the first place, those confiding patrons are afraid to trust their own taste in the smallest matter, and they will probably continue to ask my advice in every little detail of decoration as long as they occupy the house."—New York Globe.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

A Coin Trick.
Rub a coin against a smooth, upright surface for a little while, then press it hard and take your hand away from it. You will be surprised perhaps to see this coin stick to the wood. The reason is that in rubbing the coin over the wood and then pressing it hard, you drive out all the air between the two objects, and the pressure of the atmosphere keeps the coin in its place.

Just Suited Her.
"Please, ma'am, I haven't a friend or a relative in the world," said the tramp.
"Well, I'm glad there's no one to worry over you in case you get hurt. Here, Ticer!" said the housekeeper.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect it.
How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a brick dust sediment, or settling, stringy or milky appearance often indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back are also symptoms that tell you the kidneys and bladder are out of order and need attention.

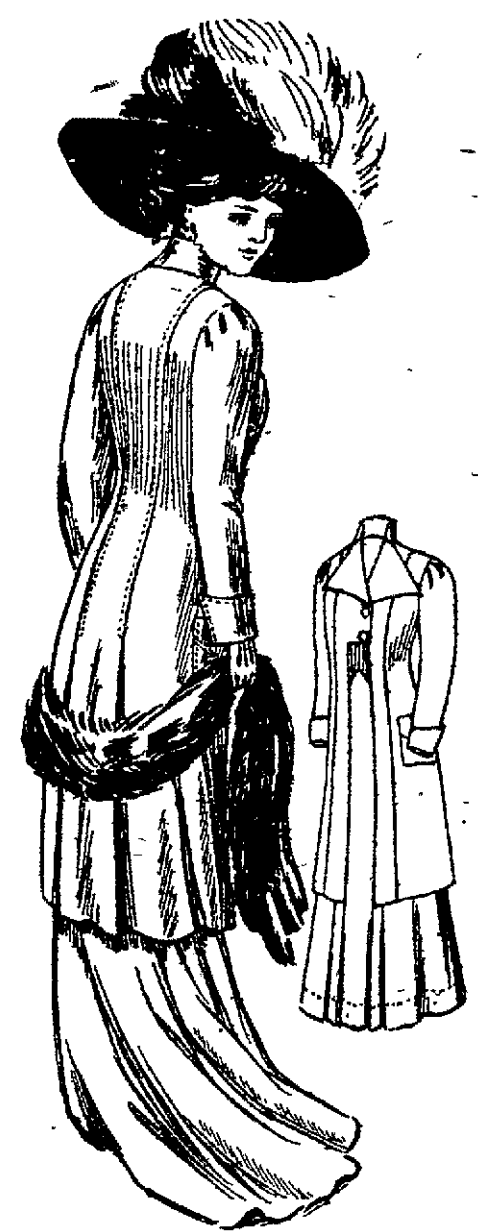

What To Do.
There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills almost every wish in correcting rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. Corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.
You may have a sample bottle sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper and remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Ottoman Silk a Popular Material. Foulard to Be Much Worn.

For evening coats ottoman silk is used considerably this season. Even the tailors have employed it with good effect in conjunction with trimmings of heavy passementerie. On suits of dark blue serge, braidings and folds of ottoman silk in the same tone or black are utilized effectively.

Foulard silk is going to be a favorite material for summer dresses. Many of these new designs have borders, and there is a return to the small floral and geometrical patterns. Bengaline silk in a light weight is another favorite. Crape effects in cheaper

Lesson X.—First Quarter, For March 7, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts viii, 26-40. Memory Verses 29-31—Golden Text, John v, 39—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

In the midst of all this great work in Samaria, Philip is commanded by a messenger from heaven to arise and go toward the south to a certain road through a desert place. That Heaven is really interested in affairs on earth, that God Himself cares for my personal affairs, that He careth for me as truly as He cared for Abraham or Isaac or Jacob or Hagar or Samuel or Gideon or the many others to whom He sent special messengers or special messages, is a great truth to have grasp one's soul. Yet it is so plainly stated in such passages as II Chron. xvi, 9; Prov. xv, 3, as well as illustrated in so many individual cases that to question it is simply unmitigated unbelief. Here is the story of a great man in the eyes of the world who had charge of all the treasure of the queen of Ethiopia, a man who was well fixed, as far as this world goes, but he evidently had no rest in his soul, but a great hunger for something that money could not buy. He had made a long journey to Jerusalem, the city of the great king, where the queen of Sheba had once gone to see the greatness of Solomon, but he was returning home unsatisfied, not having found that which his soul sought.

As he journeyed he was reading the prophecy of Isaiah. It would be a rare thing today to find any one traveling by train or trolley or steamer reading such a book. Whether he possessed the book before he left home or obtained it in Jerusalem the record does not say, but the record does say that he read it as he journeyed, and that is the important thing. He was diligently seeking the truth, and he was noticed in Heaven, and events were ordered that he might obtain what he sought (Jer. xxix, 13). God used an angel and a man to bring it about.

In connection with angels I love to ponder Ps. cxi, 20, "Bless the Lord, ye His angels, that excel in strength, that do His commandments, harkening unto the voice of His word," and then Heb. i, 14, where we read that they minister to the heirs of salvation. They are His ministers doing His pleasure, and we should be the same, proving always that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. Philip was evidently one with the angels in this matter, a willing and obedient servant of Christ, for without questioning he arose and went. The Lord knew His man and could say in this case as in some others: I have found Me a man. He is ever saying, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" But how few reply like the prophet, "Here am I; send me!" (Isa. vi, 8). It was wholly against human reason and so called common sense that a man who was being used as Philip was should leave a great work and go down to the desert. But the great question is, Whose word is it, and who is doing it? That being settled, then it must be day by day, What wilt Thou, or where wilt Thou? And to the reply there is nothing for us but prompt and cheerful obedience. Philip was a man to whom an angel or the Holy Spirit could talk. He had obeyed the voice of the angel, and now the Spirit says, "Join thyself to this chariot." So he ran to it and heard the man reading the prophet Isaiah and said to him, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" (Verse 30.) We are reminded of our Lord's oft repeated similar question, as in Matt. xiii, 51; xvi, 9-11, and of Heb. xi, 3, where we learn that the way to understand is to believe. Philip is invited to ride in the chariot that he may explain the portion being read, which was what we call Isa. lxi, 7, 8, and beginning at that Scripture he preached Jesus, His sufferings and glory, His kingdom and the way to enter it. The eunuch, seeing him whom he unconsciously longed for thus set before him, at once received Him and confessed it by baptism and went on his way rejoicing, no doubt to carry the glad tidings to many in Ethiopia. Philip was caught away by the Spirit and from Azotus to Caesarea preached the gospel in all the cities through which he passed.

Our Lord was as ready to preach to one as to hundreds, and if we are truly His followers we will be ready to do likewise. How varied was Philip's experience in this incident—a long journey on foot, a ride in a royal chariot, caught away supernaturally by the Spirit, but, best of all, used by God to turn a seeking soul to Himself! What an illustration of "for any manner of service, wholly at thy commandment" (I Chron. xxviii, 21). As to preaching Jesus, there is no one else to preach, and unless He is set forth as God manifest in the flesh, suffering for our sins, wounded for our iniquities, risen, ascended, interceding and coming again in glory to establish His kingdom, the preaching is not according to the Scriptures. Philip began just where the man was reading and preached Jesus, and while Isa. lxi is a specially good portion to begin at and to preach from, there is no part of the whole Bible where He cannot be seen and from which He cannot be set forth as the suffering and the glorified one.

There is no possibility of following Him as our example until we have received Him as our Saviour.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it, Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.
